Key market trends: Local & Global Challenges

Demographic, organization and resourcing issues are radically changing the global healthcare industry. Rising costs and demands have strained capacity at new levels of urgency.

Strides in artificial intelligence are showing great potential for a total overhaul of healthcare delivery, especially with regards to optimizing operations, better care experiences and improved access for patients. But achieving these goals will take more than merely supplying hospitals with additional technology. A complete reinvention of the healthcare delivery system, with digital health technology at its core.

The successful implementation of this new approach would also address the shortage of healthcare professionals and strained team capacities. Major healthcare providers are also looking into boosting practitioner's productivity by reconfiguring task distribution to enable them to focus on top-of-license tasks, while non-expertise tasks can be allocated to other colleagues or machines.

The healthcare industry stands on the brink of significant transformation.

Let's rise to the challenge together.

Our contributions

Driving innovation in the sector

Helping businesses grow with 360° thinking

Skills with real-world experience

We are where you are

We combine global scale with local insight, quality and understanding to give you the assurance, tax and advisory services you need to realize your ambitions.

How Grant Thornton's solutions can help you

Our approach in supporting you to assess, protect and restore value in your business starts with helping you to regain control by stabilising the business, whilst developing a robust and realistic turnaround plan. We draw upon our deep expertise across a range of different areas, customised to your specific needs.

Successful turnarounds require the development of a credible plan that has been stress tested against various scenarios, along with a transparent communication strategy that meets the needs of all stakeholders. Building trust, and not breaking promises, will be critical if the plan is to be realised.
