Key market trends: Local & Global Challenges

A major priority for government is reducing the national debt, both in Bahrain and in other overseas countries. In fact, globally the public sector is facing many challenges on a scale not seen for decades. .

The constraints on funding for public services and infrastructure nationally and internationally have changed the game at every level, from the place where financial decisions are made to the point where public services and projects are delivered.

Operations are being scrutinized for efficiency. The controls designed to safeguard financial resources are taking on a new importance. Delivery mechanisms for infrastructure projects are being reappraised. Performance and accountability are the watchwords.

Grant Thornton's public sector specialists work with you to meet these challenges and realize opportunities within the sector. Our specialists offer practical support grounded in local knowledge and insight.

Whether your services and systems are just developing or are well established, our professionals are focused on helping you improve efficiency, increase transparency and deliver public projects more confidently.
